I have received no resources from any source other than the European Parliament for running my constituency and for paying my staff, except for a one-off donation from my trade union (GMB) when I first set up my Yorkshire office in 2000. I employ three members of staff in the UK, one full time and one part time in Belgium. The latter is related to me by marriage. All staff have contracts, and comply with national provisions on tax and social security as well as with the European Parliament's rules. I also periodically take on students for short periods as part of their university course who gain experience of the Parliament in my office. I cover their expenses. None have been family members. All my staff and office expenditure is reviewed annually by an independent professional chartered accountant to certify that all monies have been properly used in accordance with the applicable laws, rules and guidelines.
